Dear Friends:

As we celebrate NYAM’s 175th anniversary in 2022, we will be taking a closer look at some of the critical health issues that have been central to NYAM’s work, both historically and today. The first topic is maternal health, the focus of this month’s virtual visit as well as the first event in NYAM’s new series Then & Now (details forthcoming).

Noted Elsewhere: A Story of Black Maternal Mortality

Morgan Taylor looks at the origins of the “blame narrative” to account for high rates of Black maternal deaths in "An Untold Story: Black Maternal Mortality in the United States," recently published in the online journal Nursing Clio. Morgan Taylor is the author of "Black Maternal Mortality in the United States: A Narrative History of Black Women and Infant Mortality." Take good care as we start to emerge from the latest COVID wave.

The Library remains open to readers and classes by appointment. All visitors must show proof of vaccination against COVID-19 and will need to be masked and socially distanced. For details, see our guide to visiting the Library.

For more ways to connect with our resources and services, check out the Quick Connections page.

The NYAM Library Team

NYAM’s work to ensure health for all is more critical than ever.

Your support helps us preserve the Library, a treasure trove of historical documents, share them with researchers and the public, and safeguard the history of medicine to inform the future of health.

DONATE NOW

The New York Academy of Medicine
1216 Fifth Avenue | New York, NY 10029

Share this email | View this email online | Update your preferences | Unsubscribe from emails

Subscribe to our email list.